As the design industry continues to evolve, the need for substantive, experience-driven learning has become increasingly important. Through this partnership, Häcker Kitchens will contribute to a national program of immersive training experiences that equip participants with a more comprehensive understanding of product performance, construction and application. The Bootcamp Series will travel to key markets across the United States, creating opportunities for meaningful, in-person engagement with a highly targeted audience of interior designers.

Häcker Kitchens' involvement builds on its long-standing investment in the North American market and its belief that well-informed designers are essential to the success of projects. By participating in the series, the brand will share insights into German-engineered cabinetry systems, material integrity and functional innovations, empowering designers to specify with confidence while maintaining integrity among their projects.

“True design excellence is rooted in understanding how products function beyond surface level,” notes Andreas Gommeringer, President of Häcker Kitchens North America. “This partnership with Designhounds allows us to move beyond traditional presentations and engage in a more hands-on dialogue. Together, we are creating an environment where education is at the forefront, where quality, performance and deep product understanding can be fully experienced.”

Starting in New York City on May 15th, 2026, the Designhounds Bootcamps introduces a more immersive approach to product training, bringing together a curated group of brands in an interactive 1–2-day session that prioritizes practical knowledge over passive learning. Each training focuses on exploring the technical and functional aspects of products, offering attendees a deeper level of insight that directly informs their work.

“Working with Häcker Kitchens as a Founding Brand Partner brings an important level of expertise and integrity to the Bootcamp Series,” says Veronika Miller, founder of Designhounds. “They share our belief that education should be actionable, attainable and rooted in real-world application. This alliance is about creating lasting value for designers by connecting them with brands that are committed to both innovation and accountability.”

In addition to supporting product education. The collaboration highlights a shared vision for the future of the design industry, one that prioritizes craftsmanship, thoughtful design and continuous learning. By investing in a platform like the Bootcamps, Häcker Kitchens reinforces its role not only as a manufacturer of high-quality kitchen solutions, but also as a proactive organization in shaping the next generation of trade professionals.
