

A heterogeneous fusion of material and dimension culminate in a new cabinet door style set to revolutionize kitchen design.

Häcker Kitchens debuts the Metal Frame Door with Grooved Glass, a new style of cabinet fronts

(Miami, FL) March 2024.

Häcker Kitchens, the leading German manufacturer of modern kitchen cabinetry brings contrast and texture to the forefront of cabinet design as they expand the Systemat line with the new Metal Frame Door with Grooved Glass. This novel door style speaks to the brand's commitment to furnish residential kitchens with progressive pieces, by melding its signature contemporary edge, with a range of stylistic decoration.

“The Metal Frame Door with Grooved Glass is a testament to Häcker Kitchens’ continual pursuit of innovation and evolution,” notes Andreas Gommeringer, President of Häcker Kitchens North America. “The juxtaposition of physical and visual details throughout the new door style plays upon haptic and optic senses, further inspiring culinary creativity within the kitchen.”

The mixed materials and heterogeneous details on display in the Metal Frame Door with Grooved Glass will revolutionize the way designers and homeowners layer the kitchen with aesthetical intrigue. The titanium frame features a sleek, matte handleless silhouette, that provides a striking, yet minimal profile for the high-definition glass insert. Interposed within the frame is a semi-translucent pane, accentuated by outward facing vertical grooving. When placed in the kitchen, the fusion of these diverging elements establishes unparalleled dynamic dimension.
